Fallen — the cause of the free

LAURENCE BRYDON, For the Fallen

If — should die think only this of me

That there's — corner of — foreign field

That is for ever England There shall be

In that rich earth — richer dust concealed

A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,

Gave once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam

A body o' England's breathing English air Washed by the rivers blest by — of home

IV—Fish: Description

God quickened in the Sea and in the Rivers,
So many fishes of so many features,
That the waters may see all Creatures, Even all that on the earth is to be found,
As if the world in deep waters drowned
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes Wk
1, day 5

Here when the labouring fish does at the foot arrive,

And finds that by his strength but vainly doth strive,

His tail takes in his teeth, and bending like a bow,

That's to the compass drawn, aloft himself doth throw

Then springing at his height, doth a little wand,

That, bended end to end, and firted from the hand,

Far off itself doth cast, so does the salmon vault

And if at first he fail, his second saunt

He instantly assays and from his nimble Still yarking never leaves, until himself flung

Above the streamful top of the surrounded heap

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly Olbon Song v, l 45

Now at the close of the soft summer's day, Inclined upon the river's flowery side,

I pause to the sportive fishes play,
And cut with finny the sparkling tide

THOMAS FOSTER, Perennial Calendar

O scaly, slippery, wet, swift, staring wights,
What is 't ye do? what life lead? eh, goggles?

How you vary your vile days and nights?
How pass your Sundays?

V—Fortune. Its Power

Sovereign of the gods Fortune, and these other are given her vain, for she alone disposeth all things as she will

ÆSCHYLUS (?), Fragments Frag 254

8 Fortune, the great commandress of the world, Hath divers ways to advance her followers
To some gives honour without deserving,
To other some, deserving without honour, Some wit, wealth, and some, wit with wealth,

Some wealth without wit, nor wit nor wealth

CHAPMAN, Fools Act v, l 1

Thou wouldest have divinity, O Fortune, we but wisdom, it is that make a god dness of thee, and place thee the skies (Nul

WHITTIER, Centennial Hymn

1 Thou, my all!
My theme! my inspiration! and my crown!
My strength in age! my in low estate!
My soul's ambition, pleasure, wealth!—my world!

My light in darkness! and my life in death!
My boast thro' time! bliss thro' eternity!
Eternity, too short to speak thy praise!
Or fathom thy profound of love to man!

HERACLITUS

One told me, Heraclitus, of thy death, and brought me to tears, and I remembered how often we two were talking put the sun to rest Thou, methinks Halicarnassian friend, ashes long and long ago, but thy nightingales live still whereon Hades, snatcher of things, shall not lay his hand

CALLIMACHUS Epigrams No 1 Quoted by Diogenes Laertius, ix, 17, where he gives a list of the persons called Heraclitus

They told me Heraclitus, thou art dead What tears I shed!

As I remembered how we two as one

Talked down the sun

Well, Halicarnassian friend, long since thou

Have turned to dust,

Yet live thy nightingales and Hades who Doth all subdue,

Shall never until Time itself shall close

Lay hand on those

CALLIMACHUS (Basil L. Gildersleeve, tr, American Journal of Philology Vol xxxii, p 111)

They told me, Heraclitus, they told me you dead

They brought me bitter news to hear and bitter tears to shed

I wept as I remembered how often you and I Used the sun with talking and him down the sky

And now that thou art lying, my dear old Carian guest,

A handful of grey ashes, long, long ago at rest, Still are thy pleasant voices, thy nightingales, awake,

For Death, he taketh away, but them cannot take

CALLIMACHUS (William Johnson Cory, tr)

One told me, Heraclitus, of thy fate, brought me tears, brought me cries,

Alas, Carian friend, how oft how late, have talked the sun adown the skies, somewhere thou art dust without a date!

of thy maketh not

CALLIMACHUS (Andrew Lang, tr)

They tell me, Heraclitus, thou art dead, we together talked the art Alas! my guest, my friend! no art thou, Long, long wert ashes, and yet Thy nightingales live I hear them E'en death them, who spares not anything

Sarah K Bolton, Sarah Tittle and Edward P Philpots Bolton only thirteen years old at the time, and is difficult to see how Philpots could qualify as "a lady from Indiana" The probability is that three wrote it with this refrain (See *Notes heartily we drink the more we reach the dregs

J M BARRIE The Admirable Crichton Act 1

Life is a long lesson in humility
 J M BARRIE, The Little Minister Ch 3

The life of every man is a diary in which he means to write story, and writes another, and his humblest hour is when he compares the volume as is with what he vowed to make it J BARRIE (Golden Book, Jan, 1931)

Life is a bumper filled by fate
 THOMAS BLACKLOCK, Epigram in Punch

Do what you will, this life's a fiction,
 And is made up of contradiction
